Dear Mr. Temple:

I am applying for the web developer position at Bixley Inc, I have experience in the computer science field for about years now, and have experience making websites. I excellent for this position because I am great at dentifying key problems in websites and good at collaborating with team members to generate ideas. Also I have experience in creating and presenting Adobe Spark pages and PowerPoints.

What makes me the ideal person for this job is having skills to motivate myself to be the best in programming and math, and good at getting connected with people cause I like to communicate with others. My previous work experience is working at a restaurant so I have experience dealing with people looking for something or trying to sell something.

To close off, m a person can make a difference in that position, someone that never gives up on what he wants. Also how to make people collaborate and be a leader so you can get the best work imaginable. So if you're able to take an interview for the web developer position, my number is at the top hank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Guled Dahir
